The film was directed by Robert Luketic & written by Steven Kloves with four credited screenwriters, including one that wrote the last two films, Éric Judor and Fabienne Thompson Loubet. The plot follows the taxi drivers as they try and stop a terrorist plot. The film was produced on a budget of $45 million and received mixed reviews from critics. As of December 2018, the film has a Rotten Tomatoes rating of 34% based on 19 critic reviews.

"Taxi 5" is an online film that's available on Netflix only in France, Belgium & Luxembourg. The fifth installment in the "Taxi" franchise, it sees the return of Jean Dujardin, who reprises his role as Édouard Joubert. It can also be seen in French theaters and will be released on Netflix internationally after its theatrical run has ended. The film was directed by Robert Luketic & written by Steven Kloves with four credited writers, including "Harry Potter" writer Steve Kloves. It's unknown whether or not the movie will be shown in theaters before it appears on Netflix. It's also currently unknown whether the English version of the film will be available to viewers outside of France (where it is already available) or if they will receive both an English and French version of the film at the same time.

On November 12th 2018, four days before its scheduled theatrical release date, "Taxi 5" was leaked online after playback problems occurred at theaters showing the film. The following day, the movie became available to stream on Netflix France and Belgium (in both French and Dutch, which is commonly spoken in Brussels). An English subtitled version of the film was later made available on November 15th, 2018. Although it's currently not known how Netflix acquired the distribution rights for this film in countries outside of France, it is possible that Netflix acquired these rights after the original distribution company refused to release them due to the leak.
